

LibraryCrunch

Bringing You A "Library 2.0" Perspective, by Michael Casey

« Basecamp, Backpack, and Ta-da List | Main | Search for Videos »

Dr. Laurel Anne Clyde of the University of Iceland

Michael Stephens mentioned yesterday on his website the passing of Dr. Laurel Anne Clyde. I never knew Dr. Clyde but I recently read a very good article by her on corporate (or enterprise) blogging. Dr. Clyde was a very forward thinking individual, and in the world of library science this is a highly needed and valued quality.

If you visit her website you will find a wealth of papers, articles, survey results, course outlines, etc. This brings up an important question: what will become of this site? I'd hate to think that her collection of information would be lost. How we manage the knowledge that people like this collect is becoming an important issue.

Posted by Michael on September 21, 2005 07:54 AM | Permalink

→ TrackBack

TrackBack URL for this entry:
<http://www.librarycrunch.com/mt/mt-tb.cgi/7>

→ Comments

That's exactly what I thought when I heard this bad news - another proof if needed that libraries may have a role to play in the personal information preservation...

Posted by: marlene | October 7, 2005 11:11 AM

→ Post a comment

Name:

Email Address:

URL:

☐ Remember personal info?

Comments:

Preview

Post