

LibraryCrunch

Bringing You A "Library 2.0" Perspective, by Michael Casey

« What Library 2.0 Is Not | Main | Speak to Me, Please - Talkr and Text-to-Speech »

Bloggin' On Bloggers

The October Library Journal cover story is on an LJ Round Table discussion titled Talkin' Blogs.

Overall it's an excellent discussion that was moderated by Michael Stephens, but one quote from Luke Rosenberger stands out as my favorite:

We need the conversation to be more two-way...newspapers are stashing away all their archives where blogs aren't able to link to them any more. We need permanent links to the content... But we need to get to the place where it really is fluid, where [LJ] can link and say, 'Here are blogs that are discussing this subject.' But, we also need to go the other way, where we can look at a Library Journal story...or any other publisher's publications and be able to comment on that.

Posted by Michael on October 4, 2005 10:12 AM | Permalink

➔ TrackBack

TrackBack URL for this entry:
<http://www.librarycrunch.com/mt/mt-tb.cgi/21>

➔ Comments

AADL gets this part and what they are doing signals the future of conversations between users and libraries. I can't wait to see what comes next!

Posted by: Michael Stephens | October 4, 2005 12:19 PM

➔ Post a comment

Name:

Email Address:

URL:

☐ Remember personal info?

Comments:

Preview

Post