

LibraryCrunch

Bringing You A "Library 2.0" Perspective, by Michael Casey

« Flickr As News Source | Main | Your Office Is Now Online »

Google Continues to Impress

CNET reports that Google has started placing National Archives videos online. The videos are all public domain and include a lot of United Newsreel, NASA, and Department of the Interior films.

Google Video product manager Peter Chane said the company is working in stages to put as many as possible of the National Archives' 114,000 film reels and 37,000 videos online.

Very cool. See it here.

Posted by Michael on February 26, 2006 09:47 AM | Permalink

→ TrackBack

TrackBack URL for this entry:
<http://www.librarycrunch.com/mt/mt-tb.cgi/122>

→ Comments

This is outstanding. I hope Google continues to go balls-to-the-wall with all their projects. Great work! They are really pushing the world of technology forward and for that, people ought to be thankful.

Posted by: Mr X | March 3, 2006 11:32 AM

→ Post a comment

(If you haven't left a comment here before, you may need to be approved by the site owner before your comment will appear. Until then, it won't appear on the entry. Thanks for waiting.)

Name:

Email Address:

URL:

☐ Remember personal info?

Comments:

Preview

Post

