

LibraryCrunch

Bringing You A "Library 2.0" Perspective, by Michael Casey

« My Mornings with Maureen: What Is the New York Times Thinking? | Main | "The Stream Has, In Fact, Moved On" »

Microsoft's Cool New Street Side Live Local

Microsoft today announced a preview of their new Street-Side imaging on Live Local. This new service takes you right down to the street level, just as if you were driving or walking down the street. The service is previewing for Seattle and San Francisco only, but should be expanding rapidly.

Here's what Microsoft said in a release:

 Today we are announcing our new street-side initiative for Windows Live Local and a Technical preview of the new street-side feature.*

 The street-side initiative is a key part of our vision to deliver an immersive digital representation of the real world that enables users to know their surroundings, find what they are looking for and know how to get there.*

 The new street-side feature augments the current map view, aerial view, and bird's eye view that the Windows Live Local site already has today to provide users with an even more immersive way to explore their local environment.*

Take a look here.

Posted by Michael on February 28, 2006 03:24 PM | Permalink

➔ TrackBack

TrackBack URL for this entry:

<http://www.librarycrunch.com/mt/mt-tb.cgi/123>

➔ Post a comment

(If you haven't left a comment here before, you may need to be approved by the site owner before your comment will appear. Until then, it won't appear on the entry. Thanks for waiting.)

Name:

Email Address:

URL:

☐ Remember personal info?

Comments:

Preview

Post

