

LibraryCrunch

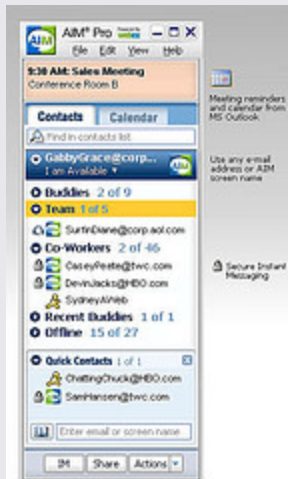

Service for the Next Generation Library: A Library 2.0 Perspective by Michael Casey

« Great Signs at PLCMC!!! | Main | Libraries and the Long Tail »

AOL Finally Launches AIM Pro for Business

This AOL news seemed to get smothered by the layoffs but it may be worth looking into if you're running an Exchange network or in need of enterprise IM. According to Gadgetell:

The service, which is free for anyone to use, integrates with Microsoft Outlook's calendar and directory and access to WebEx voice and video conferencing and collaboration services. Currently there is one-to-one video conferencing but this is slated to expand to four-way conferencing in the near future. AIM Pro gives people the option of using their professional e-mail addresses as their AIM screen names. It also provides business-grade security and SSL (Secure Sockets Layer) encryption and automatic antivirus file scanning.

Read more about the service here and download it here.

Posted by Michael on August 5, 2006 02:56 PM | Permalink

→ Post a comment

(If you haven't left a comment here before, you may need to be approved by the site owner before your comment will appear. Until then, it won't appear on the entry. Thanks for waiting.)

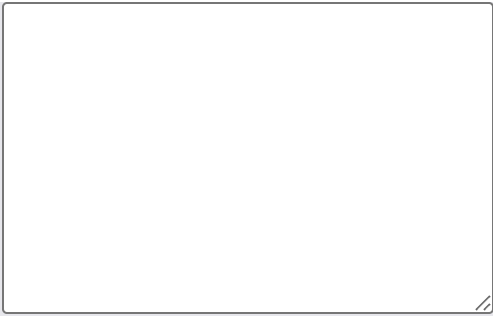

Name:

Email Address:

URL:

☐ Remember personal info?

Comments: (you may use HTML tags for style)

Preview

Post

